A: Use free products like Autocad Mechanical X-Force (32-bit), Autodesk Dreamweaver CS3 and Autocad Xpress 2009. And make sure they're paid licenses. I think you are wasting your time, if you buy license without knowing any software. Additionally, it takes too much time to get license and start working. And if there is not a possibility to cancel the order, after that, you will have much pain with receipt and worse - you will have no refund So, I strongly advise you to keep the license for the product you need, spend for it Cheers Oleg UPDATE: Thanks to Mikisoft, and a big thanks to Jay Meeks, for pointing out the problem. I've traced the error message and the reason for it. Autocad does not have the ability to check the presence of working registration certificates for each time it launches. Thus, registration is always required for each time Autocad launches. I don't want this (because I don't use registration yet) or complain about it (because I am not going to because my money is gone). I think you should research more, be more patient and, actually, pay something to get Autocad. I can't be the only one who wants the free product. UPDATE 2: After some investigation, I've found a solution to the problem. In Autocad you can specify the key file you want to use with registration: Display Registration Type Select from the Options dialog box. Click Customize at the bottom of the dialog box. Click Load and select the file that contains your registration certificate. I have hope that the situation with Autocad will get better, soon. UPDATE 3: I'm going to do an investigation and will add more information. UPDATE 4: The issue is still open, but looks like Autocad has chosen a good solution to it and fixed it. I recommend you to update to Autocad 2017 at least. The drive to
