The line was spoken by P.K. Younts, the shift supervisor. It was relayed to the rest of the control room by the operator in Houston and picked up by the NASA launch commentator in Los Angeles. The phrase was later parodied on the comedy series Seinfeld and in two episodes of Friends. The origins of the phrase, both officially and unofficially, are a subject of debate. Named by the Houston Chronicle as one of the "Top 100 Houston Moments", the phrase entered the English language due to its propagated use by the media. Unofficially Jeff Glor, the NASA launch commentator from Los Angeles, later told an interviewer, "I'm not a rocket scientist, but the crew discovered something wrong and they said, "Houston we've got a problem." And when you realize there's a problem, you say, "Houston we have a problem."" In discussing his formulation, he clarified that it is difficult to say why it is that the phrase was said. The comments on the Houston Chronicle website attributed it to the crew of the mission or to the ground control in Houston. However, Glor was also quoted as saying that it may have originated in Houston. The Houston Chronicle also quoted P.K. Younts as saying it was one of his lines: "It was during the third run-through of launch day and the rescue supervisor and I were just sitting there and we were sort of sitting there and watching the run-through, and I heard one of the control guys say something and I didn't have a good ear, and the next thing you know, we heard 'Houston we have a problem, we've got a problem.' And I said, 'Well, we've been hearing that for a while.' And of course, if you say it every once in a while

"teachers are not creatiÃ¼ve office administrators.Senior White House Official Says 'Unfortunate But Necessary' to Bring Trump, Inc. to Justice The contempt citation added another chapter to the court battle over President Donald Trump's administration, with one federal judge accusing lawyers for the administration of showing "profound disrespect" for the court after they sought to lift a court order. Michael Cohen, Trump's former attorney, speaks on Monday, March 26, 2018, in Washington, D.C. Image source: AP The following excerpt of testimony is an edited transcript of the exchange between Judge Kimba Wood and Michael Cohen, the former personal attorney for President Donald Trump. It was part of a hearing in New York on Thursday to determine whether the president violated campaign finance laws. WOOD:... [I]s the government's position correct that this is an attempt to ask the court to wade into issues that are of life-and-death significance? COHEN: It's a criminal investigation. Your Honor. And a legal investigation. It's a criminal and a legal investigation. WOOD: Mr. Cohen, you're a lawyer, right? COHEN: Yes, I am. WOOD: Well, let me explain something to you, because I read the transcript of your testimony in the Southern District, and it seemed that you were describing the question of a President who was a candidate for President, that the question was rather simple, and you were saying that he violated the statute, essentially, that you were attributing it to him. And that wasn't the case, was it? COHEN: No, it was not. It was a draft of a letter that I had prepared. WOOD: Oh, okay. Well, why don't we start, then, with those words? "I have been given an opinion that the President committed a crime, and I am writing to report the suspected
