[^1]: The optimization in [bader2017time] is restricted to unitary matrices and uses diagonal matrices for the unitaries as a parameterization. [^2]: We do not consider the $q \rightarrow 1$ limit in this paper as it is too computationally expensive to simulate an infinite-dimensional lattice for general cases. [^3]: DQPTs occur when the global maximum of the matrix product is nonzero, while PQPTs occur when the global maximum is zero. [^4]: One-site terms would show the ground-state energy as a derivative of the ground-state energy, which we want to avoid here

A statistician's comments on medical journals, research, and clinical practice. Medical authors commonly use the statistical analysis of their results to comment on their study. The hypothesis-testing method assumes the underlying data to be normally distributed. Consequently, as I show in this paper, it is inappropriate to use statistical tests in
